FLAGON. n. f. [flaccid, Welsh; flaxe, Saxon; flafke, Danish; flacon, French; fiasco, Italian; flasca, Spanish.] A vessel of drink with a narrow mouth.
 A mad rogue! he pour'd a flagon of Rhenish on my head once.
 More had sent him by a suitor in Chancery two silver flagons.
Bacon's Apophth.
 Did they coin pipots, bowls, and flagons?
Int' officers of horse and dragoons? Hudibras, p. i. cant. 2.
 His trusty flagon, full of potent juice,
 Was hanging by, worn thin with age and use. Roscommon.
 One flagon walks the round, that none should think
 They either change, or tint him of his drink. Dryd. Juv.
FLAGRANCY. n. f. [flagrantia, Latin.] Burning; heat; fire.
 Lust causeth a flagrancy in the eyes, as the sight and the touch are the things desired, and therefore the spirits resort to those parts. Bacon's Natural History.
FLAGRANT. adj. [flagrans, Latin.]
 1. Ardent; burning; eager.
 A thing which filleth the mind with comfort and heavenly delight, stirreth up flagrant desires and affections, correspondent unto that which the words contain. Hooker, b. v. f. 39.
 2. Glowing; flushed.
 See Sapho, at her toilet's greasy task,
 And issuing flagrant to an evening mask:
 So morning insects, that in muck begun,
 Shine, buzz, and fly-blow in the setting sun. Pope's Epistles.
 3. Red; imprinted red.
 Their common loves, a lewd abandon'd pack,
 The beadle's lash still flagrant on their back. Prior.
 4. Notorious; flaming.
 When fraud is great, it furnishes weapons to defend itself; and at worst, if the crimes be so flagrant that a man is laid aside out of perfect flame, he retires loaded with the spoils of the nation. Swift.
 With equal poize let steady justice sway,
 And flagrant crimes with certain vengeance pay;
 But, till the proofs are clear, the stroke delay. Smith.
FLAGRATION. n. f. [flagro, Latin.] Burning.
FLAGSTAFF. n. f. [flag and staff.] The staff on which the flag is fixed.
 The duke, less numerous, but in courage more,
 On wings of all the winds to combat flies:
 His murdering guns a loud defiance roar,
 And bloody crosses on his flagstaffs rise. Dryd. Ann. Mirab.
FLAIL. n. f. [flagellum, Latin; fliegel, German.] The instrument with which grain is beaten out of the ear.
 Our soldiers, like the night owl's lazy flight,
 Or like a lazy thresher with a flail,
 Fell gently down as if they struck their friends. Sh. H. VI.
 When in one night, ere glimpse of morn,
 His shadowy flail hath thresh'd the corn,
 That ten day-labourers could not end,
 Then lies him down the lubbar-fend. Milton.
 In this pile should reign a mighty prince,
 Born for a scourge of wit, and flail of sense. Dryden.
 The dextrous handling of the flail, or the plough, and being good workmen with these tools, did not hinder Gideon's and Cincinnatus's skill in arms, nor make them less able in the arts of war and government. Locke.
 The thresher, Duck, could o'er the queen prevail;
 The proverb says, no fence against a flail. Swift.
FLAKE. n. f. [flaccus, Latin.]
 1. Any thing that appears loosely held together, like a flock of wool.
 O crimson circles, like red flakes in the element, when the weather is hottest. Sidney, b. ii.
 And from his wide devouring oven sent
 A flake of fire, that flushing in his beard,
 Him all amaz'd, and almost made afraid. Fairy Queen.
 The earth is sometimes covered with snow two or three feet deep, made up only of little flakes or pieces of ice. Burn.
 Small drops of a misting rain, descending through a freezing air, do each of them shoot into one of those figured icicles; which, being ruffled by the wind, in their fall are broken, and clustered together into small parcels, which we call flakes of snow. Grew's Cosmolog. Sac. b. i. c. 3.
 Upon throwing in a stone the water boils for a considerable time, and at the same time are seen little flakes of scurf rising up. Addison on Italy.
 2. A stratum; layer; lamina.
 The flakes of his tough flesh so firmly bound,
 As not to be divorced by a wound. Sandys.
 A labourer in his left hand holding the head of the center-pin, and with his right drawing about the beam and teeth, which cut and tore away great flakes of the metal, 'till it received the perfect form the teeth would make. Moxon.
TO FLAKE. v. a. [from the noun.] To form in flakes or bodies loosely connected.

FLA

From the bleak pole no winds inclement blow;
 Mold the round hail, or flake the fleecy snow. Pope's Odyss.
FLAKY. adj. [from flake.]
 1. Loosely hanging together.
 The silent hoar steals on,
 And flaky darkness breaks within the East. Shaksp. Rich. III.
 The trumpet roars, long flaky flames expire,
 With sparks that seem to set the world on fire. Pope.
 Hence, when the snows in Winter cease to weep,
 And undissolv'd their flaky texture keep,
 The banks with ease their humble streams contain,
 Which swell in Summer, and those banks disdain. Blackm.
 2. Lying in layers or strata; broken into laminae.
FLAM. n. f. [A cant word of no certain etymology.] A falsehood; a lye; an illusory pretext.
 A flam more senseless than the rogery
 Of old aruspicy and augury. Hudibras, p. ii. cant. 3.
 'Till these men can prove the things, ordered by our church,
 To be either intrinsically unlawful or indecent, all pretences or pleas of conscience to the contrary are nothing but cant and cheat, flam and delusion. South's Sermons.
 What are most of the histories of the world but lyes?
 Lyes immortalized and consign'd over as a perpetual abuse and flam upon posterity. South's Sermons.
FLAM. n. f. [from the French flamme, a flame.] A transient blaze; a sudden explosion of flame from fat or dripping; and so in Scotland transferred to any thing glowing and flashily illusory.
TO FLAM. v. a. [from the noun.] To deceive with a lye. Merely cant.
 For so our ignorance was flam'd,
 To damn ourselves 't' avoid being damn'd. Hudibras, p. iii.
 God is not to be flam'd off with lyes, who knows exactly what thou can't do, and what not. South's Sermons.
FLAMBEAU. n. f. [French.] A lighted torch.
 The king seiz'd a flambeau with zeal to destroy. Dryden.
 As the attendants carried each of them a flambeau in their hands, the sultan, after having ordered all the lights to be put out, gave the word to enter the house, find out the criminal, and put him to death. Addison's Guardian.
FLAME. n. f. [flamma, Latin; flamme, French.]
 1. Light emitted from fire.
 Is not flame a vapour, fume, or exhalation heated red hot, that is, so hot as to shine? For bodies do not flame without emitting a copious fume, and this fume burns in the flame. Newton's Opt.
 What flame, what lightning e'er
 So quick an active force did bear! Cowley.
 2. Fire.
 Jove, Prometheus' theft allow;
 The flames he once stole from thee, grant him now. Cowley.
 3. Ardour of temper or imagination; brightness of fancy; vigour of thought.
 Of all our elder plays,
 This and Philaster have the loudest fame;
 Great are their faults, and glorious is their flame:
 In both our English genius is express'd,
 Lofty and bold, but negligently dress'd. Waller.
 4. Ardour of inclination.
 Snit with the love of kindred arts we came,
 And met congenial, mingling flame with flame. Pope.
 5. Passion of love.
 My heart's on flame, and does like fire
 To her aspire. Cowley.
 Come arm'd in flames; for I would prove
 All the extremities of love. Cowley.
 No warning of th' approaching flame;
 Swiftly like sudden death it came:
 I lov'd the moment I beheld. Granville.
TO FLAME. v. n. [from the noun.]
 1. To shine as fire; to burn with emission of light.
 Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? Shaksp.
 He fell flaming through th' ethereal sky
 To bottomless perdition. Milton.
 As one great furnace flam'd. Milton.
 2. To shine like flame.
 Behold it like an ample curtain spread,
 Now break'd and glowing with the morning red;
 Anon at noon in flaming yellow bright,
 And chusing fable for the peaceful night. Prior.
 3. To break out in violence of passion.
FLAMECOLOURED. adj. [flame and colour.] Of a bright yellow colour.
 'Tis strong, and it does indifferent well in flamecoloured stockings. Shakspere's Twelfth Night.

 Some surgeons make a crucial incision, upon the supposition that the wound will more easily heal by turning down the flaps. Sharp's Surgery.
 2. The motion of any thing broad and loose.
 3. [A disease in horses.]
 When a horse is said to have the flaps, you may perceive his lips to be swelled on both sides of his mouth; and that which is in the blisters is like the white of an egg; you must, to cure it, cut some flashes with a knife, and rub it once with salt, and it will cure. Farrier's Diët.
TO FLAP. v. a. [from the noun.]
 1. To beat with a flap, as flies are beaten.
 A hare, hard put to it by an eagle, took sanctuary in a ditch with a beetle: the eagle flapt off the former, and devoured the other. L'Estrange.
 Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings,
 This painted child of dirt, that stinks and stings. Pope.
 2. To move with a flap or noise made by the stroke of any thing broad.
 The dira flapping on the shield of Turnus, and fluttering about his head, disheartened him in the duel. Dryden's Æn. Dedicat.

FLA

With fruitless toil
 Flap filmy pinions oft, to extricate
 Their feet in liquid shackles bound. Ph. lift.
 Three times, all in the dead of night,
 A bell was heard to ring;
 And shrieking at her window thrice
 The raven flapt d his wing. Tickell.
TO FLAP. v. n.
 1. To ply the wings with noise.
 'Tis common for a duck to run flapping and fluttering away, as if maimed, to carry people from her young. L'Estrange.
 2. To fall with flaps, or broad parts depending.
 When suffocating mists obscure the morn,
 Let thy worst wig, long us'd to storms, be worn;
 This knows the powder'd footman, and with care
 Beneath his flapping hat secures his hair. Gay's Trivia.
FLAPDRAGON. n. f.
 1. A play in which they catch raisins out of burning brandy, and, extinguishing them by closing the mouth, eat them.

FLASH. n. f. [φάεξ, Minbew.]
 1. A sudden, quick, transitory blaze.
 When the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
 The breast of heav'n, I did present myself
 Ev'n in the aim and very flash of it. Shaksp. Jul. Cesar.
 We see a flash of a piece is seen sooner than the noise is heard. Bacon's Natural History, N^o. 210.
 One with a flash begins, and ends in smok;
 The other out of smok brings glorious light. Roscommon.
 And as Ægeon, when with heaven he strove,
 Defy'd the fork lightning from afar,
 At fifty mouths his flaming breath expires,
 And flash for flash returns, and fires for fires. Dryd. Æn.
 2. Sudden burst of wit or merriment.
 Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs?
 Your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table in a roar?
 Wicked men prefer the light flashes of a wanton mirth, which for a while suspend reflection, and hide the sinner from himself, to such discourses as awaken conscience. Rogers.
 3. A short transient state.
 The Persians and Macedonians had it for a flash. Bacon.
 4. A body of water driven by violence.
TO FLASH. v. n.
